

ELECTRIC WORKS BURNED TO GROUND

Allegany Box Company plant, just across the alley, or reach the W. S. Donnan Hardware Company plant, across the street. In the latter place was stored a considerable amount of dynamite and powder, it was said, and should the flames have reached the building, it would be hard to say where the fire would have been stopped.

Edward J. Willis, the owner, was informed of the fire while at his home at Tenmile, Henric County, seven miles from the city. He made a run to town in short order. He said last night that he thought it possible that the fire might have been caused by the electric wires, but, of course, this was conjecture. It was said that lightning had struck the building, and the gasoline tank, but this was not thought probable.

"I shall take an inventory of the damage early in the morning," said Mr. Willis, "and if the damage done in the office is too great to repair them at once, I shall secure offices on the other side of the river and open them immediately. I do not know what kind of a settlement can be secured with the insurance companies, but if it is possible, will rebuild and start work again at the earliest possible time. I should be very sorry to have to take the plant from Richmond. I feel that the greatest place is due to Miss Jones and Miss Cook for the service they have rendered us in seeing that the office equipment was saved. I attach to blame to the watchman."

In telling the story of how the fire happened, Willis said that Mrs. Jones said last night, "We had been attending the music in Washington Park with our mothers when the alarm was sounded, and we learned that it was near the electric works. We hurried over to McDonough Street and saw that it was the plant, then began trying to get into the office. The firemen broke through the door, and the boys went in and got things. Both of the young women were very modest concerning the part they had played, and neither would talk freely of her work."

WATCHMAN TELLS HIS EXPERIENCES
Tom Mann, the veteran watchman, in explaining how he discovered the fire, said:
"I had just finished firing the engine and was leaving the building to return to the front end of the plant to eat my snack when I felt the heat. I went on my knees and felt the section of the gasoline tank and all but smothered me. I tried to put it out, but it was too much, and ran into the street calling for some one to help. In the alarm, my hands and arms were burnt a little. Some of the neighbors turned in the alarm. I had no idea how the spark could have reached the gas tank as there was no fire in that section of the plant. The street car service on the Forest Hill line was stopped for more than two hours while the fire was being fought. The cars were being delayed considerably in reaching their homes. No one of the thousands who had to be taken of the fire escaped a thorough drenching, and the great majority of those who went from the central part of Richmond were forced to walk back."

Child Injured at Fire.
Fire of unknown origin, which did considerable damage to the house at 214 North Twenty-second Street, which was occupied by S. J. Barker and family, and small child, was injured slightly while making her escape from the burning building. Barker, who was the owner of the property, which was partially insured.

MONTAGUE RESIGNS

State Senator Has Been Appointed Postmaster of Portsmouth.

Governor Stuart received yesterday afternoon the resignation of Samuel T. Montague as State Senator from the Thirty-third Senatorial District. The resignation followed as a result of Mr. Montague's appointment as postmaster of Portsmouth.

Two other resignations from the State Senate have occurred since the close of the last session of the General Assembly. Senator John M. Hart, of Albemarle, resigned yesterday as collector of internal revenue for the Western District of Virginia, and Senator R. C. L. ## MORGAN RECEIVED AT WHITE HOUSE

As he emerged from the White House, Mr. Morgan said: "My visit with the President was very cordial. You will have to ask him what he talked about," was his response to all questions.

Later a persistent questioner pressed Mr. Morgan, a little closer. "Mr. Morgan," said he, "has the President sent for you and the other business men of the country, or are the business men coming here to talk to him?"

"Don't you think we ought to?" rejoined Mr. Morgan with a suspicion of emphasis.

IN CAPITAL OF NATION
The remainder of the afternoon Mr. Morgan spent observing what freedom a world-famous man may enjoy in the capital of his own country.

At luncheon, sitting in a hotel cafe alone, Attorney General McReynolds and Secretary Garrison almost rubbed elbows with him without recognizing him.

He took a trip unaccompanied to the Capitol, strolled through Statuary Hall and went to the Senate gallery. A doorman barred the way to the private gallery used by guests of Senators.

Mr. Morgan, but in hand, tried to pass in. "Get a ticket to get in here," demanded the sentry.

"No, but I am acquainted with Senator Root," ventured Mr. Morgan.

"Can't help that," responded the doorman. "I should be glad to let other galleries, where they let anybody in without a ticket."

Senator Chandler was making a speech on the administration's trust commission bill when Mr. Morgan entered the gallery. Unrecognized by any one, he looked on at the Senator upon the floor. Mr. Morgan listened for nearly an hour, then returned to the railway station, took a chair in one of the public cars and started back to New York.

Woodward opened offices in the Park Building and advertised himself as operating a branch office of the American Prison Association, as well as being able to secure government positions for applicants. They were required to pay him either $5 or $25 for the purpose of securing a bond, and those who answered his advertisements and paid the money for the bond were told that they had been successful, that their salaries would be large, and were then ordered to report for work on Monday. The police believe that Woodward intended leaving Richmond on Saturday night.

Detective Sergeant Atkinson and Kellam arrested the man in his office, and upon making a search of the room discovered evidence of hundreds of accepted applications, as well as considerable furniture which he had secured from local merchants. Detective Gordon Smith walked into the cell of the First Precinct Station and discovered the man in his cell in the City Jail.

Woodward, whose case had been postponed for hearing until yesterday morning, was arraigned before Justice Crutcher at the morning session of the Police Court, and the case was again postponed this time until July 10.

Woodward had been allowed bail at $1,000 by Judge Richardson of the Hustings Court, and expected that his father, from Washington, would appear and furnish it.

PURE RICH BLOOD PREVENTS DISEASE

Bad blood—that is, blood that is impure or impoverished, thin and pale—is responsible for more ailments than anything else.

It affects every organ and function. In some cases it causes catarrh. In others, dyspepsia; in others, rheumatism; and in still others, weak, tired, languid feelings and worse troubles. It is responsible for run-down conditions, and is the most common cause of disease.

Food's Sarsaparilla is the greatest purifier and enricher of the blood the world has ever known. It has been wonderfully successful in removing scrofula and other humors, increasing the red-blood corpuscles and building up the whole system. Get it to-day.
